Virtual International Authority File

The Virtual International Authority File (VIAF) combines multiple name authority files into a single OCLC-hosted name authority service. The goal of the service is to lower the cost and increase the utility of library cataloging and linking widely-used authority files and making that information available on the Web.

Bishop of Exeter

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The Bishop of Exeter is the Ordinary of the Church of England Diocese of Exeter in the Province of Canterbury.<sup>[1]</sup> The current incumbent, since 30 April 2014, is Robert Atwell.<sup>[2]</sup> The incumbent signs his name as his Christian name or forename followed by Exon, abbreviated from the Latin Episcopus Exoniensis ("Bishop of Exeter").

From the first bishop until the sixteenth century the Bishops of Exeter were in full communion with the Roman Catholic Church. However during the Reformation the church in England broke away from the authority of the Pope and the Roman Catholic Church, at first temporarily and later more permanently. Since the Reformation, the Bishop and Diocese of Exeter has been part of the Church of England and of the Anglican Communion.

About the library

The University of Aberdeen's collections contain over a million items collected over five centuries. These are housed between four library sites over three campuses, and also several closed access stores, making it one of the largest and best equipped academic facilities in Scotland. Sites are specialised as follows:

- The Sir Duncan Rice Library (arts, science, education and social sciences) including the Special Collections Centre, containing over 150,000 printed volumes dating from the fifteenth to the twentieth century
- Taylor Library and European Documentation Centre (law with official UK and EU publications)
- The Medical Library (hospital, laboratory, pre-clinical, community-based medicine and medical science)
- Reid Library (human and animal nutrition, related health sciences)

The local library catalogue is available online.

British Library Interlibrary Loan Codes

- Sir Duncan Rice Library: J2
- Medical Library: G2
- Reid Library, Rowett Institute of Nutrition and Health: G2

Accessing materials

Can I see live document availability on Copac? Yes. The Copac local holdings display will tell you if a document is currently on-loan, reference only etc. as well giving you local location details.

Can I obtain items via Inter Library Loan? Yes, subject to the library's local lending policy. You have to request an inter-library loan via a library of which you are a member. Talk to your own library staff about whether they think the document you need is likely to be available for loan and for advice on making an inter-library loan request. See www.abdn.ac.uk/library/facilities/services/interlibrary-loans/

Can I visit the library to view materials? Yes - visit the library's web site for access details. If you wish to visit it is advisable to contact the library in advance to ensure the material you need will be available.

How do I find primary source material held at this institution? Visit the University of Aberdeen's contributor page at the Archives Hub for information

Biography of the Day

GREENAWAY, MINERVA MARGARET, physician; b. 1873 or 1874 in Tottenham, Ont., eldest of the five children of Thomas Montgomery Greenaway and Matilda Tottenham; d. 27 Sept. 1906 in Toronto.

Minerva Margaret Greenaway was among Canada's first generation of pioneering women doctors. The daughter of Wesleyan Methodist farmers, she was born at the Simcoe County homestead originally settled by her paternal grandparents in the early 1840s. The village of Tottenham is believed to have been named after her maternal grandfather, Alexander Totten, who had immigrated to Canada as a child, in the 1830s, together with his widowed mother and five young brothers and sisters. Minerva attended school locally and taught for a short time in Tecumseth Township before embarking on a career in medicine in her early twenties.

Entering the field of medicine in the late 19th century was not an easy task for women. The founding of separate women's medical colleges in 1883 in Toronto [see Emily Howard Jennings] and Kingston [see Jennie Kidd Gowanlock*] facilitated their entry into the profession by preparing them for examinations at the university medical faculties. But gender discrimination within the profession continued to prevent the appointment of women doctors to staff positions at most medical institutions. Undaunted, Greenaway chose to pursue a career in medicine and entered the Ontario Medical College for Women in Toronto in the fall of 1894. On 31 May 1899 she obtained her MD, CM degree with first-class honours from Trinity University and she spent the following year in postgraduate work at the West Philadelphia Hospital for Women.

Norway, Nevil Shute (1899-1960)

by Julian Croft

This article was published in Australian Dictionary of Biography, Volume 15, (MUP), 2000

Nevil Shute Norway (1899-1960), writer and aeronautical engineer, was born on 17 January 1899 at Ealing, London, second child of Arthur Hamilton Norway, a clerk in the General Post Office, and his wife Mary Louisa, née Gadsden. In 1912 Arthur became secretary of the Post Office in Ireland. Father and son had first-hand experience of the siege of its Dublin headquarters at Easter 1916. Educated in England at Lynam's (the Dragon) School, Oxford, and Shrewsbury School, Shropshire, Nevil suffered from a stammer which, though it lessened, was still noticeable in his life. He was a leading figure in the British Empire Club, and a member of the Royal Society.

Sutherland, Caroline (1834-1928)

Miss Caroline Sutherland, whose death occurred last Sunday, was a colonist of 88 years, her sixth birthday anniversary having occurred soon after the arrival of the family by the ship William Nichol (Capt. William, Elder), in June, 1840. Miss Sutherland well remembered the landing in the ship's boats at Glenelg (then Holdfast Bay), and being carried ashore by sailors. Her father, Mr. David Sutherland, of Wick Caithness, Scotland, was then a partner in the firm of Forbes, McNeill, & Co., merchants, of London, and the ship was chartered to bring his family and merchandise to the new province. After living several years in a house formerly occupied by Col. Frome (and still standing at corner of Hurtle square and Halifax street), Mr. Sutherland took his family to live on his own estate at Dunrobin, near Brighton. There Miss Sutherland lived many years, until she went to keep house for her brother James, who was practising law at Mount Gambier, where her parents afterwards resided with them.

- [12] ACLAND, SIR THOMAS DYKE (1809–1898), politician and educational reformer, born at Killerton, Devonshire, on 25 May 1809, was the eldest son of Sir Thomas Dyke Acland (1787–1871) [q. v.], by his wife Lydia Elizabeth, only daughter of Henry Hoare of Mitcham Grove, head partner in the well-known firm of bankers. Sir Henry Wentworth Acland [q. v. Suppl.] was his younger brother. Thomas was educated at Harrow—where in 1826 he won the Peel prize with a dissertation published in the same year as 'Oratio numismate Peeliano dignata et in Scholae Harroviensis Auditorio recitata die lun. 1 a.d. mdcccxxvi' (London, 8vo)—and at Christ Church, Oxford, whence he matriculated on 28 June 1827, and graduated B.A. with a double first in 1831, and M.A. in 1835. His tutor was Thomas Vowler Short [q.v.], and among his friends were W. E. Gladstone, Sir Francis Doyle, Lord Blachford, Lord Elgin, and Frederick Denison Maurice. From 1831 to 1839 he was fellow of All Souls', and in 1837 he was returned to parliament as conservative member for West Somerset. At the general election of 1841 he declined to identify himself with the protectionists, and though he showed leanings towards the Young England party during that parliament, he followed Peel on his conversion to free trade, and did not seek re-election to parliament in 1847.

William Kinninmond Burton

Professor William Kinninmond Burton (1856-1899)

1900 Obituary <sup>[1]</sup>

WILLIAM KINNINMOND BURTON, eldest son of John Hill Burton, D.C.L. (Oxon.), was born at Edinburgh in May, 1856.

He was educated at the Edinburgh Collegiate School, and in 1873 was apprenticed for five years to Messrs. Brown Brothers, hydraulic and mechanical engineers, of the Rosebank Ironworks in that city.

During 1878 and 1879 he was chief draughtsman to that firm, and in the latter year he entered into partnership with his uncle, the late Cosmo Innes, in London.

Two years later he became Resident Engineer to the Sanitary Protection Association, of which Mr. Innes was Secretary.

In 1887 Mr. Burton was appointed Professor of Sanitary Engineering and Lecturer on Rivers, Docks and Harbours at the College of Engineering in the Imperial University of Tokio, Japan; and in the following year he became also Consulting Engineer on Water and Sewerage Works to the Japanese Home Department, in which capacity he designed works for many towns in Japan and Formosa.

Professor Burton died in Tokio on the 5th August, 1899. He was an original and independent worker, of great energy and industry. In conjunction with Professor John Milne, F.R.S., he wrote the well-known account of the great earthquake in Japan in 1891. He was an ardent photographer, and after the age of thirty made himself proficient in the Japanese language.

Date born:

January 1, 1885

Place born:

Glasgow, Scotland

Date died:

January 1, 1970

Place died:

Oxford, United Kingdom

Overview:

Classical archaeologist; created the major index of Greek black-figure and red-figure pottery based on artistic styles. Beazley's father was Mark John Murray Beazley (d. 1918), a London interior designer and Mary Catherine Davidson (Beazley) (d. 1918). After attending King Edward VI School, Southampton, he entered Christ's Hospital and Balliol College, Oxford, where he was "much involved" (Boardman) with the poet James Elroy Flecker (1884-1915). Flecker wrote poetry dedicated to Beazley and the two enjoyed an aesthete lifestyle similar to their fellow Oxford student, Oscar Wilde. Another Oxford classmate, T. E. Lawrence ("Lawrence of Arabia") (1888-1935), thought Beazley had the makings of a finer poet than scholar. However, Beazley was a brilliant scholar, taking firsts in classical moderations (1905) and literae humaniores (1907). He spent a year

Mildred Butler

(1858 1941)

Mildred Anne Butler was active/lived in United Kingdom, Ireland, France. Mildred Butler is known for rural scene landscape painting.

Mildred Anne Butler RWS (1858 1941)

The Irish landscape painter Mildred Anne Butler was born and spent most of her life in the family home, Kilmurry in Thomastown, County Kilkenny. Butler's work often depicts the birds and animals native to the gardens and country landscapes around her Kilmurry home. As it happened, she outlived all her 5 brothers and sisters and inherited the family house.

In the early 1880s, she traveled to Brussels and Paris where she studied drawing, and fine art painting, alongside contemporaries like Walter Osborne and John Lavery, and spent some time in London working under Paul Jacob Naftel, whom she later claimed had given her a profound understanding of the art of watercolour painting. Author: Phoebe Anne Allen (1858–1933)

Biography: Phoebe Anne Allen was born in 1858 in Hampshire. She was descended from a large landowning family in the neighborhood of Ryde. While still in her teens, her first novel Gilmory (1876) appeared and she followed it with numerous varied works, such as Spring and Autumn (1878), Minon: or, The Cat that the King Looked at (1887), The Mystery of Coxfolly (1908) (a tale of smugglers based on episodes in the childhood of her grandfather), and The Last Legitimate King of France (1912). According to her obituary, Allen had "a gift for conveying solid information in a light and readable fashion" and she wrote popular introductions to botany, gardening, heraldry, architecture, and philology. Allen also edited The Sunchildren's Budget: A Botanical Quarterly. She endured long-continued physical suffering during her later years and died in 1933 at her home in Ryde, the Isle of Wight.

Oxford Dictionary of National Biography

Andrew Lang (1844–1912), by Sir William Blake Richmond, 1884

Lang, Andrew (1844–912), anthropologist, classicist, and historian, was born on 31 March 1844 at Viewfield, in Selkirk, the eldest of the eight children of John Lang (1800–1869), sheriff clerk of Selkirkshire, and his wife, Jane Plenderleath Sellar (1821–1869), daughter of Patrick Sellar, factor to the first duke of Sutherland.

Education and marriage

Lang was educated at Selkirk grammar school, and at Edinburgh Academy. He attended the University of St Andrews for three sessions beginning in 1861, followed by a year at the University of Glasgow to qualify for the Snell exhibition, and thence in 1865 to Balliol College, Oxford, where he studied under Benjamin Jowett and T. H. Green. He took firsts in classical moderations in 1866 and literae humaniores in 1868, and was elected to an open fellowship at Merton College. On 17 April 1875 he married Leonora Blanche (Nora) Alleyne (1851–1933), youngest daughter of C. T. Alleyne of Clifton and Barbados. They had no children. On his marriage he resigned his fellowship and settled in London, earning his living henceforth as a professional writer.

Lang's hugely prolific and successful intellectual career, which saw him achieve eminence in several fields, should be viewed against a background of unremitting writerly effort to keep the wolf from the door of 1 Marloes Road, Kensington, where he and his wife—who was also a writer and translator and very much the practical intelligence behind the Lang household—lived until his death in 1912. He was a leader writer for the Daily News, until pressure of work in the 1890s forced him to give it up. He regularly wrote reviews and other contributions for a wide range of periodicals including the Saturday Review, the Morning Post, the Illustrated London News, Blackwood's, The Academy, and Punch. His monthly column, 'At the sign of the Ship', which appeared in Longman's Magazine from January 1886 to October 1905, became a national institution. Lang's facility made even hardened pressmen gasp: he could write anything, anywhere, and with astonishing rapidity, often attending meetings and composing articles simultaneously. Even more surprising was the unwaveringly high quality of what he wrote: indeed Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch was to proclaim him the most accomplished prose stylist of his generation.

OBITUARY.

MR. ANDREW LANG.

We deeply regret to announce that Mr. Andrew Lang died at 12 o'clock on Saturday night from heart failure, after a few hours' illness, at Banchory, Deeside, where he had been staying since the beginning of last week.

Mr. Andrew Lang, whose death removes one of the most remarkable men of letters of our day, was born at Selkirk on March 31, 1844, and educated at Edinburgh Academy, at St. Andrews University (which afterwards gave him an honorary doctorate), and at Balliol, Oxford, whence he took a first in literæ humaniores in 1868 and passed to a Fellowship of Merton. His authorship began with a book of poems, "The Ballads and Lyrics of Old France," which showed him already possessed of the knowledge of old French literature that he was afterwards to turn to good account in his translation of "Aucassin and Nicolette," and of the mastery of the dainty measures of poetry—the ballade, triolet, rondeau, and so forth—which was to be further exhibited in "Ballades in Blue China," "Grass of Par-nassus," and several other books of verse. Perhaps his most ambitious poetical effort was the long poem of "Helen of Troy"; but he was rather a graceful and witty versifier than a poet; and if he ever had the intention of confining his authorship to poetry the restlessness of his mind would have prevented his doing so.

For the distinctive feature of his intellect was its extraordinary versatility. So far as his very large "output" (in the trade phrase) can be classified, it falls under five heads, of which poetry was the earliest. That to which he himself probably attached the most importance was the inquiry into the genesis of religion.

of grace, of various and unexpected allusion, and of sound sense. Mr. Lang had dabbled in crystal-gazing on his own account. He knew an immense number of "ghost stories," was keenly interested in second-sight and Highland "superstitions" and powers, and preserved throughout the "romantic" expectancy of change and adventure which he held that the experience of his own lifetime justified.

Journalist, critic, biographer, poet, scholar, historian, parodist, he concealed his astonishing power of work under the air of a dilettante. To stay with him at his house at St. Andrews was to believe that he had nothing to do but to play golf and talk—being more dexterous at the second than at the first. His eyesight and other causes made him an indifferent performer at games, yet he had golfed and fished and played cricket (his brother was a famous fast bowler) with ardour, and was expert in the theory of all three. It is to Mr. Lang, we believe, that the world owes the aphorism, "If you play golf for 25 years you may get to know the difference between good play and bad," and he wrote well on cricket. There was, it must be admitted, a touch of superciliousness in his manner; but in "Dear Andrew with the brindled hair," as R. L. Stevenson called him, the superciliousness though it sometimes peeped out in his writing did not go very deep nor prevent his being loved by his friends. In his ways he was curiously casual on occasion. Last September, for instance, at the 500th anniversary celebration at St. Andrews University, he was to be seen strolling about with his doctor's robes worn over a suit of bright mustard-coloured tweed, conveying once more that air of detachment which was the favourite pose of one of the hardest-working and most thoroughly-equipped professional writers of our time.

Mr. Lang was given the honorary degree of D.Litt. by Oxford University, and was a Fellow of the British Academy. His wife, who was Miss Norah Alleyne and who survives him, is the only daughter of the late Mr. Alleyne.

Having regard to the probable spread of these movements of reform, we venture to say that, as a condition for recognition or inter-communion, there should be satisfactory evidence that the Bodies applying are sound and clear as touching the fundamental verities of the Christian faith, and that the Offices for the administration of the Sacraments are in accord with our own liturgical standards.

We have also given our attention to some general questions affecting Provincial organisation, as well as to that of the relation of Primate and Metropolitans in the colonies and elsewhere to the See of Canterbury. We hope that the conclusions we have arrived at upon these delicate questions may do something to establish the great principles, the promotion of which we believe to be the chief function of our Committee.

This Report, it will be seen, does not attempt to make any final pronouncement on critical questions. Your Committee express their conviction with regard to the New Testament that the results of critical study have confirmed the Christian faith. They do not consider that the results of the more recent criticism of the Old Testament can yet be specified with certainty; but they are confident that wherever men humbly and trustfully use the Bible, seeking always the Heavenly assistance of the Holy Ghost, it will commend itself more and more clearly to their hearts and consciences as, indeed, the Word of God.
